HOT TALK BY REPUBLICANS

CHILLINGWORTH AND GEAR DELIVER WARM ROASTS OF DEMOCRATS AND CAMPBELL.

Two large Republican meetings were held in Honolulu last night. The features of the speeches were a roast of Treasurer Campbell for his action in singling out candidates to sue them for their delinquent taxes and an address in which Charles F. Chillingworth charged that the Democrats were not supporting the haole on their ticket except where the haole was opposed by haole on the Republican ticket.

"We are supporting the Republican ticket from top to bottom," said Chillingworth at the Palama meeting. "The Democrats are not doing that for their ticket. Have you ever heard laukea make a speech in the Hawaiian language supporting McClanahan for delegate? He has not done so. McClanahan was put on the ticket to pull white votes for laukea."

Chillingworth declared that the Democratic campaigners were working hard for Thayer and Trent and not for any other white men on their ticket. This, he said, is because the Republican opponents of Thayer and Trent are whites. In other cases, like that of the delegate to Congress, no fight was being made, said the speaker, and he predicted that Democratic votes would go for Kuhio.

A. V. Gear roasted Campbell for allowing the publication of lists of candidates who are delinquent in their taxes. He said in part:

"I want to tell you as a taxpayer that a few dollars of my taxes are not paid. A representative of the treasurer came to me yesterday and told me that if my taxes were not paid up at once that my name would be published from one end of the Territory to the other. I said, 'Why don't you use the names of all that owe taxes, the rich and the poor alike?'"

"I refused yesterday to pay what I owed, because I wanted to see what they are going to do about it. I wanted to know how they would act, for if I am elected I will know just how to act. I believe in treating people fairly and all alike whether they have the money to pay or not and whether they are candidates or not."

"After I am elected you can come and shake my hand as you do today and I will see that you are all treated alike. I propose to see that every laborer gets enough to take care of his family. I will see that he gets $1.50 a day."

Kalelopu made a speech in which he said that great benefit to all had resulted from the County Act, which had been passed by the Republicans. Charles Hustace, Jr., J. W. Cathcart, W. O. Smith, D. Kalanokalanui, Jr., S. Mahetona and F. T. P. Waterhouse all made speeches at this meeting.

At Emma Square some of the same speakers held forth, and George A. Davis delivered an address in which he "handed it out" to Trent and issued a challenge to any and all Democrats to meet him in public debate. Clarence Crabbe acted as chairman and introduced J. W. Cathcart as the first speaker. Cathcart declared that the Democrats were simply a party of denunciation, hoping to break in to one or two offices, and that the secret ballot in the Republican convention was proof that it was not managed by a machine. He discussed several of the Democratic candidates and complimented the local police. He said, "There is less crime here and less crime unpunished than in any other city. This efficiency is due almost solely and entirely to the man at the head of the police department, Sheriff A. M. Brown. And he is the man whom the Democrats and a few disgruntled Republicans would replace by Curtis Iaukea."

George A. Davis spoke for W. W. Harris, who was absent on account of indisposition. He roasted the Democratic ticket in stentorian tones and eloquent language and declared that Trent and Moore had done little but draw their salaries. He characterized the Civic Federation and the Anti-Saloon League as bodies of disgruntled citizens and said that the Republican party would suitably amend the liquor laws if given a chance.

W. O. Smith said in part: "I believe it is right that every citizen should be independent and vote as he thinks is best, but there must be the regularly organized parties and when these parties have nominated their tickets it is the duty of every good man to stand by and support the ticket of his party. Unless the whole ticket goes wrong there is no reason why any part of it should not receive support. It should not be scratched for any personal reason. It is not fair to the candidates who are bearing the burden of the party fight to be sacrificed for any personal dislike some of the members of the party may have against them. Under the present circumstances it is the duty of every right-thinking citizen to stand fairly by the whole ticket."

W. T. Rawlins and A. M. Brown followed and C. F. Chillingworth repeated much of his address of the Palama meeting. Waterhouse spoke for the legislative ticket and then the meeting closed with three cheers for the ticket.

DEMOCRATS ARE WARMING UP

TWO MEETINGS AT WHICH MANY SPEAKERS PAY RESPECTS TO THE REPUBLICANS.

Democrats held forth last night at the head of Liliha street and in Kakaako last night. The Liliha street meeting had Bipikane for chairman and J. K. Prendergast for interpreter.

Kaaloha, the first speaker, roasted Senator McCandless for employing Japanese on his new building. Dan Kamahā and Charles Broad followed with requests for support of the party ticket, and Trent followed with a humorous speech which kept the crowd in good humor. W. W. Thayer followed up his former roasts of the police.

John Emmeluth roasted conditions which he appeared to regard as a sort of gerrymander and H. T. Moore brought up the matter of McCandless' employment of Japanese, and roasted the Republicans for holding their meeting in front of Clark's saloon in Palama.

Iola was the first speaker at the Kakaako meeting. He talked road salaries and dives. The road board only paid men $1.25 a day and the Democrats if successful would raise this rate. The police machine paid its underlings $70 a month while the poor Hawaiians working on the roads in the hot sun, only received $1.25 a day. Last Sunday he had made the rounds of the Palama saloons and found a disgraceful state of affairs existing. He saw women drunk in some of the dives.

W. P. Jarrett asked for straight ticket voting and H. T. Moore followed with a similar plea and roasted Charles Hustace's promises. He referred to the Democratic promise of $1.50 per day for laborers and said that it was the people, not the Republicans, who paid the taxes. E. Ingham promised a fair ballot if the Democrats got in power and said that Republicans were afraid they would stay there. He said that Democrats would win, but not by the aid of a machine.

Jack Kalakalela said that monkeys ought to vote the Republican ticket and that natives had better vote for Gear's monkeys in the Zoo than for the Republican candidates.

M. A. Silva said that the obtaining of votes by the Democrats wasn't a question of beer. They relied upon the virtue of a sane, considerate and liberal platform. The Republicans said little of paying the workman $1.50 a day until they saw a plank to that effect in the Democratic platform. They had been spending other people's money while in office and should have been more liberal in the matter of wages.

Frank Harvey remarked that Hawaii was fortunately free from tidal waves, but stated that it looked as if the Democrats were going to have a tidal wave of votes at the coming election. The Republican party was the rich man's party. The roads in the poor man's district were neglected, while the rich man's road received careful attention every time. The Democratic party was the poor man's party and the poor men are the natives, his own people.

Richard H. Trent said that the Democratic party was the people's party, the party of the common people who do the work and eat the poi and fish. He spoke of his work for the individual salary warrant and told how he had knocked the discount practice into a cocked hat. His rule was to pay a man a hundred cents on the dollar and to pay it into the man's own pocket to buy poi, fish and an occasional hat for his wahine, with. He worked for the people and not for the bosses, and called upon his listeners, in their own interests, to vote the straight Democratic ticket.

Other speakers were Moses Palau, Jesse Uluhi, C. H. Rose, Thomas Gandall, Joe Fern and Fred Weed.
